Ford

NEW LOADSPACE!

America's No. 1 Van hasn't been resting on its laurels. The new Ford SuperVan is 1½ feet longer, has 23% more loadspace than the standard Econoline. The extra length lets you carry pipe or 2 x 4's as long as 14 feet with the doors closed. Both the Econoline Van and SuperVan have more driver-room too, more car-like comfort.

NEW POWERFUL ENGINES!

Both Vans give you a choice of two big Sixes. New 170 cu. in. Six provides 23% more power at no extra cost. Powerful 240 cu. in. Six, biggest Six in any compact van, zips up steep grades even with the biggest loads. Choose either the new 3-speed Cruise-O-Matic or new fully synchronized 3-speed standard transmission.

NEW HEAVY-DUTY OPTIONS!

Deep underneath, Ford has done lots of beefing up. A heavy-duty clutch is now standard for longer life. Major structural parts are zinc coated for maximum corrosion resistance. Heavy-duty rear brakes are standard on SuperVans, and all front and rear bumpers are huskier. Even the load capacity has been increased.

Get Smart!

You have many semispoofs of the James Bond cycle on your TV screen this season. In the case of the majority of these, you have the feeling the producers are waiting to see whether the public really believes it and wants it played for keeps, or whether they don't believe it, and therefore want it played for laughs. In other words, it's sometimes hard to tell the good spies from the bad spies.

Credit the developers of Get Smart!, Mel Brooks and Buck Henry, with at least getting down to the serious business of being funny right from the start. As a matter of funny fact, the very first show had one of the funniest openings we've ever seen—when Maxwell Smart (Don Adams), as Secret Agent 86, is loudly called (by a telephone in his shoe) while he is attending a Washington concert in Symphony Hall. Later, Agent 99 (Barbara Feldon) comes to him and takes over. "I'd like to know where you were," she asks a suspect, "when the professor was abducted." At this Smart interrupts. "If you don't mind, 99," he says, "I'd like to handle this myself." Then, of course, he has his turn. "I'd like to know where you were," he asks, "when the professor was abducted."

The very next show, "The Diplomat's Daughter," had an almost equally funny exchange between Smart and the dreaded head of the Chinese arm of KAOS, the Claw (Leonard Strong). "I," the Chinese said, "am the Claw." "The Claw?" asks Smart. "No," he says irritably, "not the Claw, the Craib!" "Oh," apologized Smart, "the Claw. We were looking for the Claw." And even on old joke turn-arounds, Smart manages to pull it off. Held captive on a barge by countless KAOSes, he snaps at their leader, "Would you believe that seven Coast Guard cutters are at this very moment converging on this barge?" "No," says the leader. "Hmm," says Smart. "Would you believe six?" "No." "Well," says Smart, "what about two cops in a rowboat?" In another episode, Smart is faced with fighting invisible agents with nothing between him and them but his invisible wall. "Your guns will be useless," he tells them bravely. "Your bullets will bounce off the wall," but when he feels their guns against his temple, he deems it advisable to knock on his wall. Unfortunately, he is on the wrong side of it.

Actually, there are at least three of these gem-funny scenes in almost every episode—and that, these days, is surely har-har for the course. Also the writers, under their obviously capable producers Leonard Stern and Jay Sandrich, somehow manage to pull off the toughest job of all, a funny ending—a task which is made considerably easier by such dialog as when, for example, Smart has finally blown up the evil dwarf and says, "Well, that's the end of Mr. Big. If only he could have turned his evil genius to . . . niceness." Mr. Adams as Smart is excellent, and if Barbara Feldon is still a little coy for our tastes, Fang, as Agent K-13, more than makes up for her. He, as you've probably guessed, is a spy dog. His real name may be Fang, but his cover name is Morris.

as we see it

■ Ordinarily the appointment of a man to a top executive job in broadcasting is of interest to the man, his colleagues and his competitors. The appointment of William R. McAndrew as president of NBC News, however, is also of interest to viewers.

NBC thus emphasizes what it, and the other networks, put into effect several years ago—separation of news from entertainment, establishment of autonomous divisions or companies concerned only with news. CBS's news president is Fred W. Friendly, ABC's is Elmer Lower. All three men are on the same corporate level as the presidents of the television networks, and while this may seem to be mere company caste at work, the autonomy of news chiefs is important to everyone who watches television.

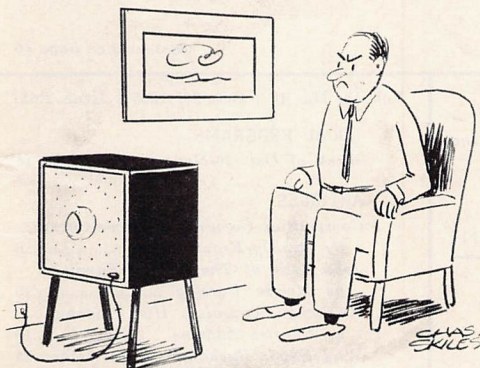

■ Most of the day-to-day interest in television is, and always will be, in entertainment programs. But the real staple of the medium is news. Entertainment programs come and go. News reports stay. And whether an unusual event be the shocking assassination of a President or the joyous visit of a Pope or a critical election campaign, we take it for granted that television will keep us informed.

The viewer isn't interested in the staggering logistics of covering regular news and special events. If he belongs to the majority of viewers he won't even watch most of the news documentaries on the air—but he may be one of those who complain if they're not on the air and condemn television for not having more of them.

■ Still, we do watch television news and we do appreciate the dedication and the ability of those who bring it to us. The men who head the network news operations bear the greatest responsibility, and they are doing a magnificent job.

COMPETITION COMES TO Carson's Corner

The late-night battle for TV customers has become a spirited three-way affair

By Stanley Frank

If two peddlers tried to cut into A & P's business by setting up push-carts in front of its branches, the situation would be analogous to the current battle for the late-night TV audience. The thriving chain of supermarkets is Johnny Carson's Tonight show on NBC, and the ambitious competitors are Les Crane on ABC's Nightlife, and Merv Griffin, syndicated to 30 stations.

It is not clear yet whether Griffin will wind up with ratings to rival Carson's, or with his neck in a sling (Crane's fate is a little more clear), but one thing is certain: The three-way tussle has pumped new interest into the night beat which, for two years following the departure of Jack Paar in 1962, offered only a choice between Carson's urbane, low-pressure humor, Steve Allen in some areas, and old movies that turn up as regularly as mortgage installments.

"My show and imitations of it are steadily pulling bigger audiences because they are the essence of TV," Carson says. "They are what the medium should be—spontaneous and topical. All other types of programming are derived from radio, vaudeville, the movies and the theater. This is the only original concept created especially for TV. The format has been changed, notably by Paar, since it was introduced by Steve Allen 11 years ago, but basically it always has exploited the sense of immediacy that is TV's chief asset."

Carson's analysis of the appeal of "interview" shows—a blend of entertainment and interviews—must be correct, for they now attract more than half the 23,000,000 people who regularly watch something after 11 P.M. Although Carson concedes he does not generate the excitement Paar did, in viewers (8,700,000), outlets (187), advertising ($20,000,000 a year) and personal loot ($200,000 a year) he's ahead of his predecessor.

Anyone who has watched a substitute fill-in for the regular host is aware that a special talent or expertise is required to keep the conversation flowing smoothly on these shows. Scores of witty, articulate people have tried and, with rare exceptions, have flopped. The pay-off is the ability to make amusing and/or pertinent comments during interviews; and it is significant that Carson, Crane and Griffin interpret their roles differently.

Carson describes himself as "primarily a comedian, an ad-lib artist." Crane says, "I'm a communicator. Discussion is my forte." Griffin labels himself "a glamorous traffic cop and a good listener to guests who have something to say."

There are three general categories of guests—amusing, cerebral and off-beat. Although all say they try to strike a balance, each host leans toward one group. Carson prefers show-business personalities, Griffin goes for intellectuals, Crane often prefers kooks who run off at the mouth.

"I have more theatrical pros because I regard the show as strictly a vehicle for entertainment," Carson declares. "Sure, I want to touch on serious topics occasionally, but the bulk of the audience tunes in every night to be amused. All the successful hosts have been comedians. A host is dead if he's at the mercy of his guests. They may freeze on him, go completely blank. He must be fast on the uptake, improvise and carry the show alone if necessary. The secret of a late-night show is instant humor. I don't want to sound like an egotistical jerk, but could Crane or Griffin do a 50-minute act at Las Vegas as I did?" (Last summer Carson received $100,000 for a four-week engagement at the Sahara Hotel in Vegas and broke all records for the second year.)

Griffin disagrees sharply. He is, incidentally, a veteran entertainer in his own right. In the 1940's he sang with Freddy Martin's band, made a record that sold a million copies ("I've Got a Lovely Bunch of Coconuts") and worked in night clubs and films.

"Comedians always are thinking ahead to the next gag to protect their image," Griffin says. "I think it's wrong for the host to rise above his guests. Besides, viewers at midnight are older and more sophisticated than the usual audience. They want to be entertained, of course, but they really want to hear well-informed people express opinions on controversial issues."

That last point is a touchy subject with Carson, who has been criticized for shying away from controversy. He is, inevitably, compared with Paar, whose emotional outbursts and well-publicized feuds and interviews with political figures gave the show an explosive quality now missing.

"It's not true that I duck arguments," Carson retorts. "Some lethal harpoons have been thrown at sacred cows on my show by Al Capp, Henry Morgan and others. By and large, though, I feel that justice continued can't be done to a controversial topic in the time allowed. I like controversy if it's honest. Too often it's a phony device used for shock effect and the audience knows it."

Crane can ruefully attest to the harsh backlash from contrived controversy. As they say in show biz, he came on strong in The Les Crane Show. He had discussions of homosexuality, marital infidelity and other topics not usually brought into the home by the electronic tube. Blasted as brash and arrogant, he was fired four months later, but, after ABC failed to find a suitable replacement, was brought back in June with a more conventional show and a subdued manner.

Crane's debut

"What I'm doing now is a truer reflection of my personality than the other thing," says Crane, an affable fellow away from the cameras. "I was ordered to attract attention by kicking up a storm on my first shot. They threw me out there naked, without a staff or even a band to back me up. I have a more conformable format now, but the difference is in the experienced people who help me."

ABC engaged Nick Vanoff, Bill Harbach and Dwight Hemion, alumni of Steve Allen's old Tonight show, to revamp Nightlife. Vanoff, an executive producer, was asked why they decided to give Crane another chance.

"The network realized Les had been misdirected," Vanoff answered. "We picked him because he's only 30, 10 years younger than Carson and Griffin, and he projects a more contemporary feeling. What we're trying to do is put on a Happening every night, a combination of Time and Mad magazines, a potpourri of now."

Despite this elaborate planning, what has happened to Mr. Crane isn't what the network executives had in mind. In short, the program hasn't done well and, for the past weeks, the only question pondered by the network chiefs is what to replace him with. It may be a soap opera.

Back to the battle. The competition for guests has been intense, especially between Crane and Griffin. A staff of a dozen people screens candidates for each show in preliminary interviews to determine whether they have a definite point of view that can be developed into angles of general interest. A good deal of time is also spent auditioning singers and comics who hope national exposure will lead to big breaks after the fashion of Steve Lawrence, Eydie Gorme, Andy Williams and many other headliners who hit the jackpot after appearing on Tonight.

In September, Crane moved his show to Hollywood, while Griffin and Carson continued to draw heavily on a little vaudeville circuit that has sprung up in New York and includes such performers as Buddy Hackett, Sammy Davis Jr., Jack E. Leonard, Zsa Zsa Gabor and Hermione Gingold. Carson's and Crane's fixed rate is $320 and Griffin's is $265.

Why comedians like Carson

Carson's larger audience gives him a decided edge over his rivals in lining up guests, but producer Art Stark insists that is only a partial explanation. "Comedians like to work with Johnny because he has an uncanny ear for pointing up jokes.

"Stars also know Johnny will protect them if something goes wrong on stage. The winter before last, Peter O'Toole was rushed on the show after getting off a plane from Tokyo. He had just finished filming 'Lord Jim' and hadn't had any sleep for three days. He was so groggy that he literally was stupefied with fatigue. Johnny immediately sized up the situation, switched to a commercial, helped O'Toole off, assured the audience that he wasn't drunk—the natural assumption—and led the other guests into anecdotes of their own experiences in similar predicaments. It was done so smoothly and quickly that O'Toole came off sympathetically instead of ludicrously."

Crane and Griffin try to combat Carson's prestige by latching onto people in the headlines—and sometimes Crane goes pretty far afield for whimsy. He gave considerable time to one Julius Epstein, who claimed he had proof that two Russian astronauts, a man and a woman, perished on a space flight and are floating around the earth like satellites.

Griffin takes in Europe

Griffin has displayed a lot of enterprize lining up guests. Every other week or so he flies to Europe on weekends to tape interviews with a wide variety of newsworthy figures ranging from Bertrand Russell and Madame Nhu to Sean Connery, Brigitte Bardot and the Beatles' John Lennon. His most arresting stunt to date was a close-up of Westbrook Pegler for a full hour while the vitriolic columnist was attacking everyone from Eleanor Roosevelt to Chief Justice Warren.

"The most amazing reaction to the session with Pegler was the number of letters we received applauding his opinions," Griffin remarks. "I thought I was letting Pegler indict himself, but I learned there is a lunatic fringe that's bigger than most of us suspect."

Another surprising phenomenon is the rising census of insomniacs, encouraged, no doubt, by the battle for late-night honors. The odds may be against the challengers to Carson, but there has been more swinging action at midnight than clean-living folks have seen since the little black box first appeared.

Op

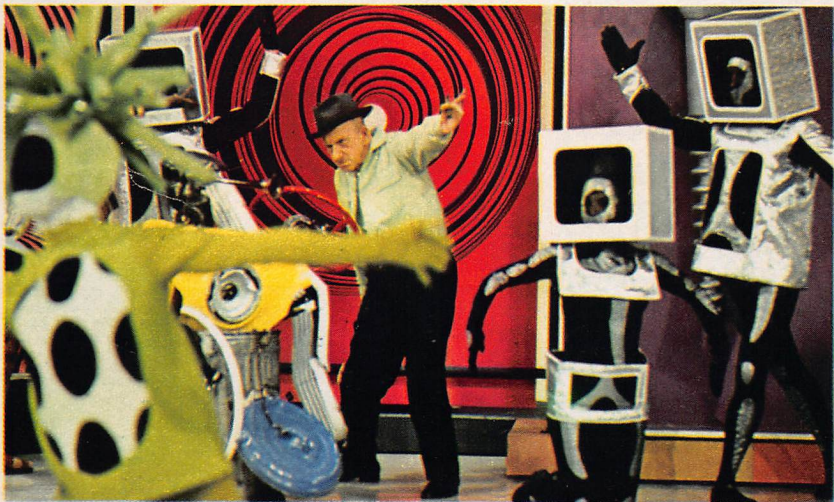

POP AND THE SCHNOZ

It's enough to make Jimmy Durante's eyes larger than his nose

Jimmy Durante has met the enemy, and they are his. In this case, they are the forces of culture, and the confrontation took place at the taping of the ABC special "Jimmy Durante Meets the Lively Arts" (Oct. 30). Admittedly, he started rather slowly. Confusion was his first reaction.

After he watched a pop-op art ballet featuring dancers in tights, polka-dot sweaters and hats which resembled cut-up garden hoses, he said, "I was stunned when I saw [pure Durantese] it. I never hold of it before." He picked up momentum, however, when shown a work from what he called "the ash-can school" of art: an actual garbage can and some hooplike pieces of metal. Told it was a masterpiece, continued

he snorted, "It looks like a bicycle. Why, I got a garage full of masterpieces like that."

And from then on, for Jimmy, it was all downhill. "You know them paintings," he said of some art in the show, "they look like a guy took a piece of canvas and wiped his brush off on it. After he toins out one of those masterpieces, he's never hoid of again. He's shipped out of town."

Besides the visual arts, Jimmy also met up with Shakespeare as interpreted by The Man from U.N.C.L.E., Robert Vaughn ("When they told me he was going to do Hamlet I t'ought they was talkin' about a little town out West"); ballet as danced by Rudolf Nureyev; and opera—"The Barber of Seville"—as sung by Roberta Peters. And then there were The Shindogs, a rock-'n'-roll group whose presence seemed to puzzle Durante. "We t'ought art overlooked the fact that The Shindogs is art," he said. "But I guess it's an art in itself to be able to play out of tune."

Altogether, from Shindogs to Shakespeare, Jimmy said, his presentation of art on the show "runs through the guntlet [more Durantese]."

Actually, Jimmy's brush with the arts was cleverly contrived to show off his own down-to-earth, saloon-type humor against the contrasting backdrop of "culture." He expresses his viewpoint well in a theme song in the show, "I'm Durante, the Patron of the Arts," and with a knock-about ballet performance in which he wears kilts, red argyle socks and a shoulder-length wig. This dance is a mimic of Nureyev. "I hate doin' ballet," he said. "I wanted to show the legs. I'm not proud of 'em, I just like to show 'em off once in a while."

The trick of playing against the backdrop of art to enhance his own comedy is nothing new for Durante. It has always been a favorite foil of his. And now that pop and op are popular, they too must serve.

"I keep up with the times," Jimmy says. "Nostalgia, forget it. What the hell, you can't talk about the 'old days.' People wanna be entertained."

FOR THE RECORD

Northern California Edition

NBC: Sammy Davis has been invited to star in a weekly variety series to replace Convoy Friday nights. The final details are being worked out.

Fast Shuffle: The rites of autumn are in full swing at the networks. As is their annual custom, the programming chieftans of ABC, CBS and NBC are performing the fast shuffle, while Nielsen calls the tune. They're canceling shows, swapping shows, shifting shows, in moves calculated to give their network a fractional edge in Nielsen's ratings. Here's what's in the works so far:

ABC: The Farmer's Daughter will trade places with Peyton Place's Friday episode, so that Peyton passions will see the Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays instead of Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays. A new twice-weekly film series, Batman, based on the comic-book superhero, is replacing Ozzie and Harriet Wednesday nights and Shindig Thursdays. The Saturday edition of the twice-a-week Shindig has also frugged its last—Ozzie will move into its time period.

CBS: The cancellations of Rawhide and Slaterry's People were reported earlier. Now it has been announced that Slaterry's replacement is Trials of O'Brien, which is being transferred from the Saturday-night frying pan to the Friday-night fire — opposite one of NBC's hottest shows, The Man from U.N.C.L.E. Secret Agent, which had a brief run this summer, is being revived, to fill O'Brien's old Saturday-night slot. The Art Linkletter series which was to have supplanted Slaterry has been "deferred"; it may eventually replace the foundering Steve Lawrence Show.

Baseball Deal: NBC is shelling out $30,600,000 for the rights to televise the World Series and the All-Star Game for the next two years, and a major-league "Game of the Week" for three years. NBC outbid CBS for the rights. ABC, which televised weekly ball games this season and was not thrilled with the financial results, passed up the bidding this time.

Summer Dropout: Edmond O'Brien did not tarry long with The Long, Hot Summer. Last week he and the show parted company, by mutual agreement. According to the official announcement by 20th Century-Fox Television, which produces the hour-long ABC series, O'Brien's departure was the result of "artistic differences of opinion" over the concept of the character Will Varner, whom O'Brien played. O'Brien had completed 10 episodes as Varner before he headed for the exit; five had already been aired, giving the producers a little time to decide whether to hire another Will Varner or write the role out of the show. O'Brien was not available to reporters after leaving the series, but there had been reports earlier that he had complained that The Long, Hot Summer was turning into "Peyton Place down South." At the time of O'Brien's leave-taking, ABC was busy denying — and emphatically — rumors that The Long, Hot Summer would either be canceled or turned into a twice-a-week half-hour serial.

THANKS TO SEARLE

Thanks to Ronald Searle ["Portrait of a Clown," Oct. 16] for the wonderful words and pictures about a truly great and lovable entertainer—Red Skelton.

*Mrs. R. Church

He can make you laugh or cry as he chooses. For a picture of pure genius—color him "Red."

*Chanin Hale

HORTON REMEMBERED

Many thanks for your memory-provoking article "Roaring Chicken Is One Active Bird" [TV GUIDE, Oct. 16]. Well do I remember the wonderful Edward Everett Horton stock company of the 1920's in Los Angeles—plays such as "The Nervous Wreck," "Smilin' Through" in which Franklyn Pangborn played the romantic lead, and especially Sutton Vanes' "Outward Bound" in which Mr. Horton gave, as usual, a fine performance.

*George P. Farrell
Pasadena, Cal.*

NEW TEAM

Have regained interest in baseball, what with the Yankees and their broadcasting "boresome foursome" out of the World Series; Minnesota hosting its first; and the concise, informative reporting of self-restrained Ray Scott and Vin Scully.

OASIS

My gratitude to ABC for its daytime discussion show, The Young Set—a welcome oasis in a wasteland of soap opera and senseless shows.

*Mrs. Michael F. Carroll

WASTREL

Your "Ten Years Ago This Week" does more than stir our nostalgia for "the golden days" of television. It underscores the deterioration of a wonderful, exciting prodigy to a cheap, boring prodigal, squandering his potential.

*Loretta Rick

BIOLOGY LESSON

Your picture feature on Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea ["While Strolling Through the Whale One Day..." Oct. 9] was an outstanding example of wrongheadedness. And Voyage's attempt to portray—in the early evening hours—a whale's alimentary canal must have set biology instructors back a full semester.

Stephen L. Cotler Waltham, Mass.

WIGGLING AWAY

Let us hope that Shindig has wiggled, wobbled and writhed itself out of existence for good.

*Beverly Jean Cooper
Hastings, Neb.*

7:00 7 ABC SCOPE—Documentary

A film study of Kenya's President Jomo Kenyatta, and his program of political and economic development.

Kenyatta, one of the earliest African nationalist leaders, was exiled by the British for his alleged involvement in the 1952 Mau Mau uprising. He returned in 1961 to head the Kenya African National Union, the country's largest political party. In the nearly two years since independence, Kenya has made great strides, concentrating on internal development and non-alignment in international affairs.

President Kenyatta explains Kenya's slogan "Harambee" (a word meaning "all work together") and his concept of African socialism, based on an ideal of brotherhood rather than communal ownership.

Films show village life and the modern capital city of Nairobi. American physician Roy Shaffer describes his work among the primitive Masai tribesmen;

Age 8 (1925)

Choate (1934)

England (1938)

Navy lieutenant (1943)

SPECIAL For this 60-minute film chronicling the life of John F. Kennedy, producer Allan Jay Friedman composed original folk-type music, with lyrics by Academy Award-winner Paul Francis Webster (Lyrics, "Love Is a Many-Splendored Thing") to supplement actor Joseph Cotten's spoken narration.

The Kingston Trio, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir and Gordon MacRae perform the musical narrative as stills, news film and rare footage gleaned from the Kennedy family and friends trace the former President's career.

With emphasis on lesser-known aspects of his youth, the program shows the early Kennedy years from his birth in Boston, May 29, 1917, through school days at Dexter, Choate and Harvard; his life as an ambassador's son; his Navy career; his move into politics first as a congressman, then as a senator; his marriage to Jacqueline Bouvier; the birth of their first child; his unsuccessful drive for the 1956 Presidential nomination; his nomination and election in 1960; and the White House years.

HAUNTED HOUSE

John Astin is delighted with the move

BY MELVIN DURSLAG

John Astin and sons David, 6, and Allen, 4, practice yoga in Beverly Hills home.

Turn page for story

In the lotus lands west of Los Angeles, Beverly Hills is usually considered topmost drawer, with Westwood, home of UCLA, just a little lower in the mortgage-company ratings. But an actor named John Astin has recently moved from Beverly Hills to Westwood and feels that he has surged upward in the movieland pecking order, the reason being that he formerly lived in the poorer, or lower, part of Beverly Hills, where the homes are only in the $50,000-$60,000 price range, give or take a couple of thousand.

The funny thing is that at the time he moved there, five years ago, Astin felt he was doing pretty well. It wasn't too long before, he recalls, that he and his wife Suzy occupied a fifth floor walk-up on Amsterdam Avenue in New York City.

"It consisted of two rooms," he says. "One was a combination living room-kitchen and the other a bedroom. Our rent was $54.75 a month, but it wouldn't have been so high if we couldn't see the Hudson by sticking our heads out the window."

The uses of adversity

The influence that this view-apartment had on his life, his philosophy and his career is interesting. And, in retrospect, he concludes that if he had lived in something more plush—say, a three-room tenement for $75—he possibly would be there today.

As it is, he is one of the stars of The Addams Family, seen weekly on ABC. He plays Gomez, the mustachioed, courtly master of the house. Things never have been better for the 35-year-old actor, a skillful performer who has learned to recognize the commercial facts of life. What was once his art is now his craft, and, in his language, he has "joined the system," which is to say he is aiming to get his hands on the loot.

Actually, John was raised in anything but hungry circumstances. The son of Dr. Allen V. Astin, director of the National Bureau of Standards, he grew up in a comfortable home in Washington, D.C., a short distance from his birthplace, Baltimore. For a while, his favorite study was English, but this changed one day in high school when he was asked in the classroom to rise and discuss Melville's classic, "Moby Dick."

"Trying to be a wise guy," recalls John, "I said, 'It strikes me as a plug for the whaling industry.' The teacher cut me up so badly that I shifted my interest to math."

His skill as a mathematician (he claims he once mastered a whole semester's work in differential equations in one night) earned him a tuition grant to Washington and Jefferson College, where he discovered an interest in drama when he appeared in a school play.

After two years, he shifted to Johns Hopkins University and earned his keep as a math tutor. In his senior year, he accepted a part in a campus play and rang down the curtain on math. He developed such interest in the theater that, after winning his diploma in 1952, he went to the University of Minnesota to do graduate work in drama. He took part in 40 plays at the school, in community theater and in stock. He also played the violin, studied Shakespeare and worked out what he felt was a foolproof system for beating the horses.

Like many a good system player before him, Astin bit the dust, and, with his bank roll reduced to $100, he set out for New York to seek work on the stage.

"At that point of my life," he says, "I embraced the four-square American classic that one who does a good job will get important work and become a success. What I didn't realize was that you needed connections to get the parts and you needed money to make the connections. The New York stage is almost as commercial as Hollywood television."

The best that John could do was off-Broadway, where he swept out the theater before finally landing a role, at $15 a week, in "The Three-Penny Opera." Eventually he got up to $90 a week. He also met Suzanne Hahn, an attractive redhead from Winnfield, La., who was a privileged member of the cast, meaning that she drew no cleanup duties. They were married in 1956 and rented the apartment on Amsterdam Avenue.

Rumbles on the roof

"For openers," says John, "we found bedbugs in the place. We called the exterminator. He comforted us by saying that apartments in Sutton Place had bedbugs, too."

"Next, we discovered that teen gangs used the roof of our building for their rumbles. Since we lived on the top floor, the nights got pretty hairy. One evening, a pyromaniac set fire to the tenement next door. It burned to the ground."

John recalls, not fondly, that the subway station reposed two blocks from his house. "The neighborhood was so rough," he says, "that when I walked from the subway at night, I would turn up my coat collar, loosen my tie, mess up my hair and assume a maniacal look in the hope that one nut wouldn't attack another. I frightened the hell out of a lot of people."

Nor was Mrs. Astin without problems on Amsterdam Avenue. One night a youth followed her into the building and grabbed her. But her screams drove him off.

"I decided we had to get away from that neighborhood," says John, "but I needed money. I had to find some way to beat the system. I asked myself what I was able to sell.

"I looked around and found that there was a market for crazy voices in TV cartoon commercials. I was good at crazy voices. I borrowed $200 from my brother and made a record which I distributed to all the key people in the cartoon commercial field. Slowly business started coming in, and the first thing I knew I was making a substantial living. We moved to a nice apartment in Brooklyn Heights and I used my funds to take people to lunch and to dinner for the purpose of making connections. I had confidence in myself as an actor. But I needed parts in order to be seen."

He was. Tony Randall, who worked with Astin in "Goodbye Again," encouraged him to go to Hollywood where Tony said his agent would work in John's behalf.

Parts in movies and television led to a comedy series in 1962-63 called I'm Dickens . . . He's Fenster, in which Astin played Harry Dickens, a hapless builder on whose head the bricks usually fell. The show was anything but a roaring success, but it established John as a polished performer and doubtless landed him in The Addams Family.

Boyishly handsome at 6-foot-1 and 185 pounds, Astin is a friendly, talkative sort with a genuine interest in a wide variety of subjects ranging from Chekhov to professional basketball. He can name the starting five of every team in the National Basketball Association.

Warning of John's glibness, a network official remarked, "You have to be careful starting a conversation with the guy. Whereas most actors brush you off with quick answers, he'll talk your ear off."

Eight-inning talker

"He phoned me last year during the first inning of a World Series game I was watching on TV," says Nat Perrin, producer of The Addams Family, "and he didn't hang up until the eighth inning."

Perrin describes Astin as an actor with an uncommonly thick epidermis. "He's a fellow who is never completely satisfied with his work and he invites you to pick him apart. But he does understand comedy and he presents Gomez as a charming, humorous character with an unusual interest in sex. What makes our show different is that the hero has this giant passion for his wife. He doesn't look upon her as a PTA mother, but as a hunk of woman who stirs the beast in him."

Of course the foregoing observation is bound to get Perrin in trouble with that vast coterie of PTA mothers—each of whom believes she is a hunk of woman.

The exaggerated love scenes that Astin plays with Carolyn Jones (his wife Morticia) are undeniably funny. With old-world dignity, he kisses her hand, and, carried away, begins nibbling up the arm. And when she whispers something French, like crème de menthe, or soup du jour, he loses his composure altogether and envelops her with a feverish embrace.

Successful in its first season, The Addams Family, according to David Levy, the executive producer, is planning 34 films for 1965-66. "We are confident that the show can last five seasons," says Levy, which is a garden-variety projection by developers of series, but is more than the average time they last. In some cases, this is a blessing.

Where many actors express qualms over the prospect of being tied to a show for extended periods, Astin has no complaints. Says he:

"When my New York stage friends rib me by asking, 'How do you feel since you sold out to TV?' I answer, 'I'm glad someone is buying.'"

Still, John doesn't apologize for television. "It's no great art form," he says, "but it's no disgrace, either. We provide light entertainment for people and, considering the haste with which we work, our quality is nothing to be ashamed of."

Real company man

Astin paints himself today as a "real company man."

"I'm up in the morning at 7," he says, "and I report to the studio at 8. If we work past 6:30 in the evening, I collect my overtime. If the sponsor tells me to pose for promotion pictures, I pose for promotion pictures. If he tells me to make an appearance at a supermarket, I appear at the supermarket."

The father of three children, the oldest of whom is 6, John confides that the family is living well, especially since moving to the new house in Westwood.

"I guess you have to put up some sort of front," he says, "but before I bought the house, I asked myself this question: Will I be able to continue living in it if the show folds tomorrow? If the answer is no, I will skip that particular house."

One gathers that Astin has had his fill of living on Amsterdam Avenue and doesn't care to walk home any more with a maniacal look.

A Father Appraises His Progeny

By Charles Addams

Before the Addams Family appeared on television last fall, it had been a subject for speculation among magazine readers and, notably, the late New Yorker critic Wolcott Gibbs, who, in 1947, wrote in his foreword for the book "Addams and Evil":

"The thoughtful reader . . . will wonder about the inhabitants of that crumbling Gothic pile known, at least to me, as the 'Old Charles Addams Place.' What dark and shameful compulsion brought the proprietors together—the haggard ruined beauty and the ignoble half-breed? What unspeakable rites united them, if wed they are at all? We know their little girl has six toes on her left foot, that her younger brother likes to mix his childish poison brews, and that their only playmates are bats and spiders and probably The Thing that has no face but wails and drags his chains at night. And we know still less about the shambling giant who ministers their dreadful needs, except that he is apparently dumb and almost certainly a homicidal maniac."

Mr. Gibbs concluded that on the whole he thought the glimpses from the printed page were enough, and indeed in 1947 he was undoubtedly right. Now, on television, in what some of us like to think is the Decline and Fall of the American Family, we find ourselves faced by a group who certainly put up a united front against conformity, and the result is a peculiar form of self-identification.

In rereading the characterizations I did for the show, I find the special flavor of each has been preserved.

Morticia, for example, was to be beautiful and aristocratic, the real head of the family and the critical and moving force behind it. Incisive and subtle, she is given to low-keyed rhapsodies about her garden of deadly nightshade, henbane and dwarf's hair. She indulges the mischievous activities of the children but feels that Uncle Fester must be held in check.

Gomez is a crafty schemer but a jolly type in his own way. Sentimental and often puckish, he is full of enthusiasm, and a firm believer in the survival of the fittest. Wednesday, child of woe, is wan and delicate, with her mother's black hair and dead-white complexion. Quiet and sensitive, she loves picnics at the underground caverns. Pugsley is an energetic, pop-eyed boy and a dedicated troublemaker.

As for Lurch, this towering butler has been a morose presence about the house forever. He is not a very good butler but a faithful one. The children are his favorites and he seems to guard them against good influences at all costs.

Granny is foolishly good-natured, easily led, and some family troubles are due to her weak character.

Uncle Fester is incorrigible and, except for the good nature of the family and the ignorance of the police, might be under lock and key. His complexion, like Morticia's, is dead white. The eyes are piglike and deeply imbedded and circled unhealthily in black. Without teeth and absolutely hairless, he has a peppery manner and a high-pitched voice.

The casting has been superb, and Carolyn Jones and John Astin, as heads of this household, are beyond my reproach.

IT rains

Designer Victor Joris of Cuddlecoat has come up with some of the snappiest raincoats in years . . . bright, shiny vinyl that has very much the look of a wet, glistening seal. Though we didn't have rain, we did have lots of fog and mist when we photographed television-and-movie actress Sally Kellerman sitting at the edge of one of this country's most beautiful shorelines — San Simeon, Cal. Sally wears (left) a double-breasted tobacco-brown fisherman's coat. About $60. And right, one that is sleek and zippered and fire-engine red. About $50. continued

Below: A slim, single-breasted coat in black-and-white stripes of vinyl. We added the white, deep-brimmed "Garbo" hat that ties under the chin, and the print scarf by Doro. Coat about $50. Sally is wearing black silk pants with this coat and B. F. Goodrich black canvas boots with all the short raincoats.

We like the "poured-on" look of this beige vinyl raincoat (below) with black trim on the sleeves and collar. Coat zips up the front and buttons over at the neck and waistline. About $50. The black vinyl hat is a smaller version of the white "Garbo," and doesn't Sally bear a striking resemblance to the actress?

Right: Shades of a female James Bond! A long trench coat in violet vinyl, belted for a real secret-agent look. Here, she wears it over a Bikini. If you're not on the beach, we suggest a simple white crepe evening dress. Trench coat about $65.

Which is why Edgar
Buchanan is an actor

He still has his dentist's license—just in case.

He's about the same age as Cary Grant—in his early 60's, that is—but admits, "I've never been a lover." When he made his first picture, "Arizona," in 1940—seven years after Cary Grant wooed Mae West in "She Done Him Wrong"—he was 37 but played a 70-year-old judge. That's pretty much the way it has been ever since. Still, when older ladies see him on the street or in the supermarket they shout, "You're a darling," and he says, "I've had this all through my career—some old woman wants to take care of this old cuss." The old cuss is Edgar Buchanan, dentist turned actor, familiarly known as "Buck" around Hollywood and as "Uncle Joe" of Petticoat Junction to TV viewers.

He hasn't changed much since that day in 1940 when he postponed an appointment with a dental patient to see director Wesley Ruggles about a part in "Arizona." He waited three hours and then got what he considered a quick brush-off. As he went out the door of Ruggles' office, he muttered, "The s.o.b.!" He was halfway down the street when the casting director caught up with him to tell him that Mr. Ruggles wanted to see him right away. When he got back, Ruggles said, "Would you like to play an s.o.b.?" Buchanan did, and he hasn't practiced dentistry since, although he still keeps his license in California and Oregon—just in case.

He got into both acting and dentistry almost accidentally. He was taking a pre-med course at the University of Oregon in Eugene and not doing too well at it. "Acting was a pipe course, so I took it to bring my average up," he says. But the opposite happened. He liked acting so well that he spent more time at it than his studies—"The old man jerked me out of pre-med and put me into North Pacific Dental College in Portland. I joined three acting companies on the side." He did so well at acting that he was offered a two-year scholarship in the George Pierce Baker class at Yale.

"My folks weren't against acting—they just didn't see it as a profession," Buchanan recalls. "One time my daddy and I were out hunting. That night, just before we went to sleep in the tent, he said, 'Son, you do what you want to do. I know you've got what it takes to make it as an actor. But what if you don't make it—have you thought of that? If you finish your dentistry course, you can still be an actor, but you've got something to fall back on—a profession that's respected everywhere and that you can work at wherever you are.' I thought it over and decided he was right. My old daddy was a great man. I just lost him last Christmas—he was 93."

The elder Buchanan was a dentist who moved to Oregon from the Midwest. Edgar was born in Humansville, Mo., on March 20, 1903, and was 7 years old when the family—he has four sisters—moved west. The trip took a week by train. Buchanan says, "All I can remember is sitting up all that time, eating sandwiches and bananas and oranges, and smelling cigar smoke." Edgar went to high school in Ashland, Ore., before going on to the university and college.

It was at dental college that he met Mildred Spence, a classmate, whom he married in 1928, the year before they were graduated. He and his wife went into practice together in Eugene, where Edgar also continued his acting, and eventually became assistant head of the University of Oregon's drama department. In 1938 the Buchanans moved to Altadena, Cal., and, in addition to practicing dentistry, Edgar began acting at the near-by Pasadena Community Playhouse. His first role there was in Maxwell Anderson's "Valley Forge." It was a serious part, but the audience laughed. Buchanan says, "I had always thought I was the world's greatest heavy, but the people would always laugh. It took me 15 years to figure out what the hell they were laughing at. It was this gravelly voice of mine."

Although he has been in many Western films since he got the call to try out for "Arizona," he takes uncharacteristically snobbish pride in the fact that he has never done a low-budget horse opera of the Roy Rogers-Gene Autry genre. Rather he has appeared with stars of the magnitude of John Wayne, Glenn Ford, Robert Taylor, Katharine Hepburn, Spencer Tracy and William Holden. In "Texas" with Ford and Holden, he even played a dentist and got fan mail from dentists praising his technique.

Paul Henning, who created Petticoat Junction, wrote the part of Uncle Joe with Buchanan in mind. Henning says, "I remembered him from many pictures—no particular one—as an easy-going, affable, likable person. I had never met him, but when I did and talked to him, I knew he was exactly what I had in mind for the part." Concerning the part, Buchanan says, "I'm pretty much the same type of guy myself—I'm lazy and ignorant." Which, of course, is not true. He has combined two successful careers; he has been married to the same woman for more than 35 years (they have an adopted son, 19, and live in a Hollywood apartment); and once, on a movie location in Kanab, Utah, he opened an abscess for actor George Brent with the tine of a fork. Let's see Cary Grant match that.

Finally, Perfected Color Television.

It's as easy to tune as black and white.

Up to now, there were two problems with color television sets.

One, they were hard to tune.

And two, once they were tuned almost any outside interference (airplanes, cars, electric shavers, even aluminum siding) threw the picture out of whack.

General Electric has taken care of both.

New Magic-Memory tuning.

We developed a new kind of tuning system called Magic-Memory tuning.

What's magic about it is that it's ridiculously easy to tune. All you do is turn all the dials until their pointers point straight up.

That's it.

Some people say they can get a perfect color picture in less than 10 seconds.

New color coaxial cable.

Then we tracked down what was picking up all the outside interference.

It was the old flat lead-in wire that connected the set to the antenna.

So we redesigned our sets and added a coaxial cable lead-in.

(Coaxial cable is what TV studios use because it has two layers of plastic and one layer of woven metal to shield against outside interference.)

What we had when we finished was the first really Perfected Color Television set. Bright, clear, natural color with no more fuss than black and white.

And that's what a lot of people tell us they've been waiting for.

If you're one of them, see your G-E dealer.
